

HORSE CRAZY KIDS

TRIVIA TIME

?

How many teeth does a pony have?

?

What do you call a group of horses?

What is the world's smallest horse breed?

If you know, then you just might be taking home the trophy at horse trivia night. When it comes to the amazing world of horses, you clearly are a SUPER FAN.

If the questions above left you stumped (Herd, 38-44, Falabella), not to worry – we're here to help up your knowledge with 10 Blaze reader questions.

Q&A

1

Why do horses sleep standing up?

Sleeping on their "feet" is useful for an animal that might need to wake up quickly and run from danger. That may not sound very restful for us, but for horses, it's easy. Their legs are made up of a system of bones, muscles and ligaments that lock in place to prop them up safely while they sleep.

2

How well do horses see?

Horses can't read the eye doctor's chart, but experts say that horses can see details quite well. They have good visual acuity... better than a cat or a dog sees, but not quite as good as we see. What a horse can see from 20 feet away, humans can see from 40 feet. But when it comes to night vision, horses see much better than us.

